In our own Backyard: Overseer Of the Asian Plant Collections

by Eugene "Jesse" Nash IV

With the plethora of plants in gardens dotted throughout Greenbelt, it is no surprise that the National Arboretum in Washington, D.C., is a popular nearby attraction for Greenbelt residents. What may be unexpected is that one of Greenbelt's own is in charge of the Asian Collections and has worked at the Arboretum for over 30 years.

Carole Bordelon moved to Greenbelt in 1979 after meeting her husband, Mike, at the University of Maryland. He soon took a job at Behnke Nurseries in Beltsville. At the time, housing in Greenbelt Homes Inc. was merely an affordable place to live for the newlyweds. A decade later, they had grown to like the community so much that they decided to buy a home with a quarter acre of yard in Lakewood where they could plant a large, diverse home garden.

Meanwhile, Bordelon worked with the Maryland Department of Agriculture as a mosquito controller and did various odd jobs at the Arboretum. When a gardening position with the Arboretum's bonsai collection opened up, the staff chose Bordelon, who loves all the tedious work that goes into making plants grow. There she has stayed for more than three decades, ultimately moving into an oversight position in the Asian Collections, which she still holds today.

The Asian Collections include trees and other plants, particularly ornamentals, from China, Japan and elsewhere in Asia. As the overseer, Bordelon's responsibilities include maintaining and developing the collections. This has led to multiple business trips to parts of China where "not many Westerners were at" to find new additions to the garden.

"It's a nice collection. Although it's a lot of conservation, it's [still] a garden," said Bordelon.

Magnolia Student Vegetable Garden in Its Second Year

by Matthew Arbach

When it comes to the vegetable garden at Magnolia Elementary School (MES), fourth grade teacher Laura Browning says the students love it. Students do all the work of weeding, watering and planting the bonanza of vegetables, which include grape, Roma and beefsteak tomatoes, tomatillos, cucumbers and more.

"It's fun watching them as they revel in the dirty hands that result from this horticultural endeavor," said Browning.

This is the second year for the garden, which is a project of the Environmental Club. Browning started the club three years ago and supervises the garden project. Not exceeding 20 students, the club is mostly comprised of third- through fifth-graders. Participants engage in hands-on, interdisciplinary activities focusing on wildlife, the environment and conservation.

"My fall goal is to get donors to help us build two more beds for fall veggies, expand the program to two days a week and get a few community members to participate in the program in order to build our other courtyards into outdoor learning spaces," Browning said.

MES has been recertified as

Council Chambers Showcase Paintings by Greenbelt Artists

by Butch Hicks

Este artículo está disponible en español en nuestra página web www.greenbeltnewsreview.com.

Greenbelt City Council business is conducted in chambers not previously known for aesthetic appearance. After a recent council room refurbishment that included removing 20-year-old drapes, applying fresh paint and adding window blinds, the room remained visually boring. Councilmembers conferred with city staff. With the endorsement of the Greenbelt Arts Advisory Board, staff launched a new program of rotating displays that will honor Greenbelt artists while brightening the room and creating visual interest.

Part of the display development was Councilmember Colin Byrd's vision, seeing an opportunity to display the art of Greenbelt students and other local artists. He said councilmembers agreed the council room should showcase art. After coordination with staff, Arts Supervisor Nicole DeWald took the lead in programming exhibits for the space.

To achieve the council room's aesthetic update, DeWald coordinated with the Department of Public Works to have a track

Theatre Wins $75K Grant, Intends to Improve Pop-up

by Melissa Sites

Old Greenbelt Theatre (OGT) has won a $75,000 grant from Maryland Historical Trust, administered by Maryland Milestones/Anacostia Trails Heritage Area. This grant will improve the space adjacent to the theater, which is currently in use as the Pop-up. It will help further the mission of creating a destination for historic tourism in Greenbelt. The grant will provide for physical improvements to the Pop-up space, display of exhibits and improvements to the space as a teaching facility.

According to Caitlin McGrath, executive director of Friends of Greenbelt Theatre, "The theater is a de facto landing point for people who are interested in Greenbelt history. Because of our location and the iconic marquee, we can be a launchpad for further exploration of Greenbelt as the caretakers of this historic space."

Part of the mission of OGT is to be a center for film education in the county, so the grant will support development of the Pop-up space as a Media Arts Literacy Lab. The grant will allow OGT to create historical displays and wayfinding materials for visitors who want to learn more about the history of the city. Over 500 students have come to OGT for field trips and workshops, but the grant will help build a permanent home for these events.

"For a field trip we would work with the teacher to identify a film that fits with their curriculum," McGrath said. "For example, Eleanor Roosevelt High School art students came

Too Many Ticks and Deer

I wrote before about the increase in the number of deer visiting 5 Court Ridge Road up to 10 at one sighting. Perhaps you have been too timid to publish it. So far this summer, I have had two tick bites, both requiring medical attention. On both occasions, I had been in my garden less than an hour watering my plants.

The tick problem is the more serious, but this year I have had hostas eaten that have been in my garden untouched since I planted them, 20 years ago. The deer must need food.

I know no one wants to kill Bambi, including me, but something must be done to reduce the deer population around 5 Court and everywhere else in Greenbelt.

I also know that this is an election year and I will be sure to raise this issue in candidate forums. We must come together to resolve this very delicate issue.

Mishkan Torah Donations For Migrant Families

Pictured is a small portion of the donations of supplies given by members of Mishkan Torah and collected by the step-daughter of a Mishkan Torah member for use by migrant families seeking to enter the United States. The supplies, according to Mishkan Torah member Shalom Fisher, will be driven by truck to and distributed by the Catholic Dioceses of Laredo, Texas. The Laredo Dioceses serves asylum seekers in shelters where refugees are awaiting hearings before a judge after being released by U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE). The shelters have become overwhelmed by the recent surge in people escaping from dangers in their home countries and the need for supplies has become desperate.

Farewell

A headstrong Chinese-American woman named Billi returns to China when her beloved grandmother is diagnosed with terminal cancer. What ensues is a clash of cultures: the family's very Chinese decision to keep grandma Nai Nai in the dark about her own illness and stage an impromptu wedding to see grandma one last time versus Billi's American belief that telling her would be better. The funny and heartwarming story is based on Lulu Wang's own history. Actress and rapper Awkwafina (Oceans 8 and Crazy Rich Asians) gives a fine performance in her first lead role.

Work on Purple Line Could Cause Kenilworth Traffic Tie-up

by Lesley Kash

During the month of August, Purple Line construction crews will relocate overhead and underground utilities on Kenilworth Avenue between River Road and Riverdale Road. With crews working around the clock on weekdays and weekends, delays are possible at any time. Temporary lane closures will occur.

The Purple Line is a 16-mile light rail line that will extend from Bethesda to New Carrollton. After estimated completion in 2022, it will provide a direct connection to the Metrorail Red, Green and Orange Lines at Bethesda, Silver Spring, College Park and New Carrollton, respectively. The Purple Line will also connect to MARC, Amtrak and local bus services.

In July, crews closed the right-hand southbound lane on Kenilworth Avenue between River Road and Riverdale Road with barriers to delineate the work zone. Pedestrians and bicyclists must stay outside of the construction zone at all times.

The Purple Line will be powered by a catenary system of overhead wires. As a transit system separate from Metro, it will operate mainly in dedicated or exclusive lanes. Most of the line will be at the roadway level, with short segments elevated or underground.

GAC Presents Comedy The Country Wife

The Rude Mechanicals, celebrating its 20th anniversary, will present the comedy The Country Wife at the Greenbelt Arts Center between August 9 and 17.

William Wycherly's theatrical piece is a 1675 Restoration sex comedy about a rake who convinces society he is impotent and thus safe in the company of its wives. Director Alan Duda resets the play to the 1955 era of I Love Lucy and The Honeymooners. The play contains adult situations inappropriate for young children.

The Country Wife will be performed at 8 p.m. on August 9, 10, 16 and 17, with a 2 p.m. matinee on August 11. For tickets, and to find out about other productions coming soon, visit greenbeltartscenter.org or see the ad on this page.

Thoughtful Discussion At Roosevelt Center

The flash of lightning and rumble of thunder caused the postponement of August 6's discussion of safety by the MakerSpace thoughtful discussion group at Roosevelt Center. Thus, on Tuesday, August 13, from 7 to 9 p.m., weather permitting, the group will discuss what it means to be safe, for an individual, a group, a society. What factors take away from feelings of safety? What should the need to be safe take priority over? Feel free to join the conversation.

Alan Henry

D. Alan Henry

D. Alan Henry died at the age of 72 on June 28, 2019.

Alan, as his family and friends knew him, was born on June 11, 1947, to Paul and Mary Henry. He had three older siblings: Maura, Teddy and Paula. He attended DeMatha High School, followed by the University of Maryland, and became a nationally-known figure in criminal justice reform.

Mr. Henry was a true child of Greenbelt. He attended St. Hugh's Elementary School and served as an altar boy, was a member of Boy Scout Troop 202 and, as a teen-ager, served as a lifeguard for several years at the Greenbelt pool.

He had a lifelong passion for music; he and his friends Randy Mason and Tim Murray first performed as the Prince Georgemen at the 1962 Labor Day talent show and continued to perform together until recently for anyone who would listen.

Mr. Henry spent his career fighting to help people who had been unjustly or improperly jailed. This began during the demonstration in Washington, D.C., after the assassination of Martin Luther King, Jr. and led to his working within the D.C. court system. He later became the executive director of the Pretrial Justice Institute, then known as Pretrial Services Resource Center. He spent many years "telling people who worked in courts, county government and pretrial services what he thought about the dismal state of pretrial justice in America," the Pretrial Justice Institute said in his death announcement.

Mr. Henry loved Greenbelt and often returned for the Labor Day Festival from his home in California, where he settled with his wife Debbie several years ago. He was known for his charm, his quick wit and his handsome smile – a terrific guy who will be dearly missed by the many who knew him and loved him.

He was preceded in death by his parents, his sister Maura and his brother Teddy. He is survived by his wife Debbie, his sister Paula, cousins Karen, David, Sara and Frieda, many nieces and nephews, many dear friends and his dog, Samantha.

A life celebration will be held on Saturday, August 31 at 11 a.m. at Kneeling Point Church in La Plata. In lieu of flowers, send donations to DeMatha Catholic High School or the Alzheimers Association.

In Memoriam

Remembering Elizabeth Jay

by Sandra A. Lange

Elizabeth Jay arrived in Greenbelt in 1984 to assume her job working on weather satellites at NASA and soon became one of those special Greenbelt characters. Elizabeth died on September 18, 2018, at the age of 81, but not before she left her mark on the countless visitors to the Greenbelt Museum where she served as a volunteer docent. She was extremely proud of the fact that she was the first person to volunteer to become a docent when the museum opened in 1987. Before she became ill, she was the docent on duty on the first Sunday of every month for 28 years.

Elizabeth greatly enjoyed talking to old timers who reminisced about Greenbelt's early days. She was delighted when they told her their stories and when they discovered that some things had not changed very much over the years. "They are so pleased to find Greenbelt as they remember it," Elizabeth commented once.

Sheila Maffay-Tuthill, museum education coordinator, remembers how Elizabeth never hesitated to express her strong opinions, occasionally sprinkling them with a salty word or two. She was a tireless researcher during the lead up to the city's 75th Anniversary celebration, particularly focusing on race relations in Greenbelt's history, Maffay-Tuthill stated.

Elizabeth retired from NASA in 2003. Her 13 Court neighbors were her family and together they shared potluck dinners and Home and Garden TV nights. She was devoted to her cats and kept their ashes in her living room when they departed. She was an avid reader of mystery novels and enthusiastically watched mystery shows.

Elizabeth Jay exemplified Greenbelt's community spirit via her volunteer activities, her laughter and her sense of neighborliness. She will be missed by many.

Our condolences to the family and friends of Alan Henry, a local Greenbelt boy who never strayed far from his Greenbelt roots and the spirit of community activism he imbibed here.

Annual Cassels Service Award Nomination Deadline: Oct. 15

by Leta Mach

At its annual meeting next November, the Greenbelt Consumer Cooperative will give an organization or group $1,200 to carry out a project that will positively impact the people of Greenbelt. The grant comes from the Jim Cassels Community Service Award, which honors the legacy of Jim Cassels, Greenbelt's Outstanding Citizen of 1978 and organizer of the co-op in 1984.

Organizations, cooperatives and local groups are encouraged to think of a project to implement in the next year that will benefit Greenbelt and then apply for the $1,200 award by the deadline of October 15.

Since its creation in 2006, the Cassels Award has funded a variety of projects that are fitting tributes to the memory of Jim Cassels and his legacy of community involvement. Past awardees have undertaken a wide range of activities.

The most recent award was given to the Greenbelt Association for the Visual Arts to introduce folk tales to fourth graders at Greenbelt Elementary School by making shadow puppets and performing a Ukrainian folk tale, The Giant Turnip.

In 2017, the Eleanor Roosevelt High School used its award for the ERHS Music and Art Festival. The festival was held in the Roosevelt Center in April and featured music performed by ERHS theater students, along with a student art show at the New Deal Café. The festival highlighted the way ERHS music, art and drama departments work together with the wider community to make the arts a part of everyday life in order to enhance and enrich the educational experience.

In 2016 the Greenbelt Zero Waste Circle, a collaborative effort between Green Team volunteers and Public Works staff received the award to create a permanent collection site near the recycling containers at the Buddy Attick Park for items that can be up-cycled (used to make other items).

WAGS (Well-wishers of the Animals of the Greenbelt Shelter) used its 2015 grant to conduct Animal Safety Workshops to help children and their parents identify a dog or cat's stress signals, to understand how to approach unfamiliar animals and to know what to do if approached by an unfamiliar dog off leash.

With its 2014 grant, the Alight Dance Theater gave a free performance of its work, Frontline: Women of a Forgotten War, which commemorated the challenges women from Maryland and D.C. faced during the War of 1812.

Greenbelt MakerSpace used its 2013 grant to facilitate a Repair Café. The grant provided tools and materials to help people work together to make repairs on such things as clothes, furniture, electrical appliances, bicycles and more. Electricians, seamstresses, carpenters, bicycle mechanics and other repair specialists helped people make their repairs.

The 2012 awardee, the Friends of Still Creek, developed an educational project in partnership with Greenbelt Elementary School. The multi-dimensional project included hands-on activities for the students to help educate them about the natural environment and their local watershed. The activities included a field trip to Indian Creek, planting and harvesting a vegetable garden at the school and encouraging recycling.

In 2011, the Chesapeake Education, Arts and Research Society (CHEARS) used its grant to purchase equipment to provide outdoor classrooms and constructed handicapped gardening tables at the Three Sisters Demonstration Gardens project outside the Community Center.

The 2010 Jim Cassels Community Service Award funded a Greenbelt Association for the Visual Arts/Greenbelt Access Television (GAVA/GATE) art and animation project. In the project, young people ages 10 to 15 created an animated video that was screened as part of the city's 75th Anniversary celebration.

The Friends of New Deal Café Arts (FONDCA) used its 2009 grant to fund the first year of the Eileen Peterson Youth Music Series, which offered young musicians from local schools the opportunity to perform in Roosevelt Center.

The Greenbelt Tennis Association provided tennis lessons for young people with its 2008 grant. The Greenbelt Climate Action Network and the Beaverdam Watershed Watch Group used their grants for programs and equipment that encourage people to be environmentally responsible.

The recipient of the 2019 Jim Cassels Community Service award will be announced at the Co-op annual meeting.

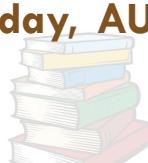

Applications and award guidelines are available at the Co-op main office or online at emailmeform.com/builder/form/3Jcw0A02xkNo.

Applications should be returned to the cooperative's main office or submitted online by October 15. For further information, contact Donna Hoffmeister at 301-441-9377 or email donna.hoffmeister@verizon.net. Information is also available on the Co-op's website, greenbelt.coop/cms/community/jim-cassels-award.

Zinnias Gladden Volunteers' Hearts at the Farmers Market

by Cathie Meetre

As always, the market turns up some heartwarming stories. Sometimes vendors give leftover items to the market volunteers at closing time. It's one of the small perks of giving time and energy to the market. Sometimes the gift requires creative thinking, e.g., what to make with an unexpected plethora of kohlrabi. On one recent weekend, market volunteers got a beautiful posy of zinnias from Glade Link Farms.

Market Secretary Anne Marizza emailed to thank Gwen Whitmore of Glade Link for the flowers received by the volunteers. Whitmore and her daughter-in-law, Steph Whitmore, were tending the stall that day for Kenny Whitmore, the farmer. Gwen Whitmore's reply is as follows:

"Anne, you are very welcome! I love zinnias too. I always remember my great aunt who, like my grandmother, planted a single row across the garden on the farm that is now ours. Not to mention the bright vibrant colors! Thanks for all you do for us at the market. Greenbelt has such loyal and friendly people. I had told Steph, my daughter-in-law, that she would be surprised at how everyone always asked about their boys and sure enough they did, over and over today. You all truly have a community to be proud of."

If an activity can somehow be representative of the community that gave it life, then the Farmers Market epitomizes that. It supports healthy eating, responsible farming, community interaction and care for its members. It reaches out across generations and extends itself to be inclusive – offering the same thoughtfulness to its vendors as it does to customers.

This caring community and well-organized and run market are a couple of the many reasons our last year's vendors are back and well-established in a routine some of them have now followed in Greenbelt for the full 11 years since the market's first season. In fact, Whitmore went on to remark, "I have been attending farmers markets for 30 years now. I am also a co-owner of the newly re-branded Field Fresh Farmers Market in Frederick at the Frederick Fairgrounds. When we were reorganizing our market, I stressed the really great things that I saw happening at Greenbelt Farmers Market and we tried to incorporate them into our operation. I hope you at Greenbelt know how fortunate you are to have the volunteers and customers that you have. The sense of community really makes the market work!"

This year, new vendors – some weekly and some on an alternating schedule – fill a few additional spots that a little spatial engineering revealed, allowing the market's board to squeeze in more variety than ever. With more rain than has usually been the case early in the season, overall business has been slightly down but Greenbelters have been out in force. If it's raining, they don't linger – but they buy almost as much produce. A Greenbelter knows how to get down to business when it's raining cats and dogs. But the more recent sunny days have been busy, with the pop-up picnic area on the slope near the Community Center occupied by families eating lunch while their kids play tag around the trees and bushes.

On Monday, July 8, the Greenbelt City Council presented the Farmers Market with a much-appreciated proclamation on behalf of Buy Local Week at the market, where, in fact, every week is buy local week. Items for sale at the market are all produced within either a radius of 100 miles, or within Maryland. Many of our vendors are within about 25 miles.

The market is every Sunday except Labor Day, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the parking lot beside Roosevelt Center. It runs from Mothers Day to the weekend before Thanksgiving – plus a holiday market in December to align with the city's annual Festival of Lights. The market is run by volunteers, so offers of assistance or donations are always gratefully accepted – both for Sundays and for other supporting activities. See the website at greenbeltfarmersmarket.org for details of how to help, or sign up at the information booth any Sunday.

to watch Loving Vincent." Other classes have seen Hidden Figures or nature documentaries.

Let's Make A Movie was a successful OGT workshop sponsored by the Greenbelt Community Foundation (GCF). It brought in two experimental film makers, Pat Doyen and Rebecca Reynolds, who gave every child a strip of 35-mm black or clear leader to mark. The pieces were spliced together and the resulting experimental film was revealed at the OGT's third anniversary in spring 2018.

At first, "experimental film confused and annoyed the kids," said McGrath. Once they understood it, they took ownership and were proud of what they created.

In a program funded by GCF in spring, 2018, Greenbelt residents packed the theater for two days with residents who brought in their old home movies for transfer from outmoded video formats. Such field trips and workshops will be enhanced by having the Media Arts Literacy Lab developed properly, according to McGrath. She added that the lab might also present joint programs with MakerSpace when the two organizations' missions align.

Another feature of the Media Arts Literacy Lab will be installation of three iPads presenting interactive exhibits, including local home movies and photographs.

The grant will provide for installation of several historical exhibits. A Greenbelt timeline exhibit, created by Nora Simon for Greenbelt's 75th anniversary, will be provided by the Greenbelt Museum.

McGrath stated, "Above the timeline we'll have an exhibit called Maryland in the Movies, showing important dates and ephemera." The ephemera will be donated by patrons and donors and include things like posters, cameras, projectors, film reels, and other objects that have been hiding in storage.

Currently, OGT has four display cases: one with the image of OGT's opening night, one about Hollywood and beauty ideals, one with posters about local historic theaters and one devoted to Greenbelt movie history, including lobby cards and posters of films that showed in the theater. The Pop-up currently displays a piece of movie screen covered with handprints from the littlest visitors who were invited to come and leave their mark when the OGT began its temporary closure.

The grant will provide for restoration of the original stone terrazzo floor, common to all the buildings around Roosevelt Center. Any holes and cracks will be filled in, and the floor polished to look as new. Other physical improvements will include bringing the Pop-up into full ADA compliance with a new door and better bathrooms, plus a better induction loop system to assist the hearing impaired. For the micro cinema, 40 seats will be installed on risers, with a good wall to provide better soundproofing than the existing curtain.

"It would be great if we could restore the original light fixtures that are no longer in the space," McGrath said. "There's still an outline on the wall of what the old fixtures looked like." She invited anyone who remembers the original light fixtures to submit a photograph, drawing or description.

The renovation of the building's roof is on schedule. The city owns the building and will pay for the roof renovation as a planned improvement. "We are still aiming to reopen in October," McGrath said.

While Bordelon prefers the more mundane weeding and mulching work of her first job at the Arboretum, she is gratified to be making a legacy with her current position. Every year, she mentors new interns, usually sustainability majors from the University of Maryland. She is happy to please the ever-growing number of visitors to the Arboretum with her evolving plant collections.

Looking back, Bordelon cannot help but point out how the times have changed for someone with a passion for gardening like herself. Older nurseries like Behnke's are closing down with the rise of big-store gardening centers, even as more millennials visit the Arboretum and start their own gardens.

Bordelon sees an influx of college students interested in environmental science which gives her hope for the future. But at the same time, she and many of her colleagues who grew experienced in horticulture are approaching retirement with fewer direct replacements.

When Bordelon isn't working she is tending her backyard: shade, tropical and vegetable gardens that she says are "pretty well maintained." Occasionally, she travels with her husband, visiting botanical gardens in Greece, Germany, Italy and throughout the United States. She also loves to care for her grandchildren a Green School as part of the Maryland Green Schools Program. According to the Prince George's County Public School website, this program provides an effective, student-centric means of incorporating environmental literacy into our schools, beginning at the elementary level and continuing through high school. Five criteria must be met for inclusion: environmental issue instruction in multiple grades or subject areas; 10 percent of staff has received environmental professional development; the school must host a school-wide celebration of its environmental achievements; student-led sustainable practices must be implemented on campus; and the school must establish meaningful relationships with community partners for environmental purposes.

At MES, the staff and student collective goes by the name Green Team, which Browning chairs. School staff and students practice recycling, including all the necessary separating of recyclables.

Browning explained the importance of being creative with funding. They obtain funding through outside donors, volunteers, parents and others. Grant money has helped fund purchases such as paper bins for each classroom and eight of the school's 10 dumpsters (the other two were provided by the County). The program received a $500 grant two years ago from the city council.

In past years, the Environmental Club has completed other projects such as setting up solar lights in the garden, distributing plants to classrooms to help freshen the air and sponsoring a recycled product decorating contest.

The garden project has received much support and training from the William S. Schmidt Center, which hosts the Green School initiative. The harvested vegetables are available to the students and their families as well as staff.

While Browning and parents are present to supervise the work if needed, she said that the garden is ultimately a student-run endeavor.

LEGAL ANNOUNCEMENT

NOTICE OF AVAILABILITY Draft Environmental Assessment (EA) and Finding of No Significant Impact (FONSI)

U.S. Department of Agriculture Agriculture Research Services Proposed Building 307 Renovation and Construction of an Emergency Generator Project Henry A. Wallace Beltsville Agricultural Research Center

A draft Environmental Assessment (EA) was prepared addressing the proposed renovation of Building 307 at the Henry A. Wallace Beltsville Agricultural Research Center (BARC). The U.S. Department of Agriculture's (USDA) Agricultural Research Services (ARS) is proposing to renovate the building to provide BARC with a new, state of the art research facility that meets Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) standard and provides the most efficient laboratory space following guidance set forth in the Energy Policy Act (EPAct) 2005 and Energy Security and Independence Act (EISA), as well as associated Executive Order 13834, Efficient Federal Operations.

I. NAME OF ACTION

Proposed Building 307 Renovation and Construction of an Emergency Generator Project at the Henry A. Wallace Beltsville Agricultural Research Center, Beltsville, Maryland

II. DESCRIPTION OF ACTION

a. Proposed Action:

The USDA, ARS Facilities Division (FD) is proposing the renovation of BARC Building 307. Once renovations to Building 307 are complete, USDA ARS will transfer approximately 80 employees to Building 307 from other BARC facilities. The overall purpose of this project is to completely renovate Building 307 (interior office space/laboratories, windows, and window frames while keeping the historic character of the building) to provide new office space and research laboratories and to consolidate research functions from other areas of the BARC campus. In addition to the renovations, a new 1,200 kilovolt ampere (KVA) emergency diesel generator will be constructed northeast of Building 307.

b. Alternatives:

The EA analyzes three alternatives: Plan A (the Preferred Alternative) which is described above; Plan B, which proposes the demolition and replacement of Building 307; and Plan C, the No Action Alternative. The EA includes the findings and conclusions of the No Action Alternative and the Proposed Action.

III. ANTICIPATED ENVIRONMENTAL EFFECTS

BARC anticipates temporary, negligible to minor, adverse impacts to water resources, ground resources, biological resources, visual resources, air quality, noise, traffic and transportation, utilities and infrastructure, and waste management. Long-term beneficial impacts will result from a safer, laboratory space for ARS employees. These impacts are associated with demolition and renovation activities of Building 307. No significant, adverse impacts are expected from the Proposed Action. The EA includes a more detailed analysis of environmental impacts.

I. PUBLIC INVOLVEMENT

The draft EA and FONSI were made available for public review at the following locations: BARC, 10300 Baltimore Avenue, Building 003, Room 009, Beltsville, MD 20705, College Park Community Library, 9704 Rhode Island Avenue, College Park, MD 20740; and Beltsville Branch Library, 4319 Sellman Road, Beltsville, MD 20705. The documents are also available on the ARS website at <https://www.ars.usda.gov/northeast-area/>.

Public comments about the Proposed Action are due, in writing, by September 13, 2019. All public comments, and related agency responses received during the comment period will become part of the Final EA.

system installed for hanging artwork. She then reached out to a number of local art educators, including the art teachers at Greenbelt public schools, inviting them to participate in an inaugural show. She said, "The display celebrates Greenbelt's vibrant network of life-long learning opportunities in the visual arts, including both academic and community-based programs. The City of Greenbelt honors the leadership of its art teachers in promoting curiosity, trust, wellness, confidence and creative expression throughout the community." Displays in the chamber are expected to rotate quarterly. They will feature primarily group exhibitions of artwork by youth and adults who live, work and learn in Greenbelt.

Seven Greenbelt art educators accepted the invitation to participate in the current show: Jennifer Acree, Dora Kennedy French Immersion; Kate Conrad, Greenbelt Middle School; Ingrid Cowan Hass, Greenbelt Association for Visual Arts; Sally Davies, Mary Gawlik and Racquel Keller, Greenbelt Recreation; and Christine Wilkin, Eleanor Roosevelt High School. From their web pages, information and interviews, the artists show a variety of techniques and art interests.

Davies has illustrated magazines, cookbooks, menus, posters, textbooks and many children's books. She shows color nuances through color layering and adds additional color interest with underpainting. But a draw to her art pieces is her unique, above-her-subjects birds-eye view.

Gawlik creates ceramic art tiles and tile panels. She creates relief surfaces in her designs and explores beyond traditional tile shapes and functions. Gawlik is an artist in residence at the Community Center where she also teaches tile making, surface decoration and glazing techniques. Keller, also an artist in residence, creates with paintings, drawings, collage and assemblage. She said the strength of her palette, light and brush-stroke are vital to a fuller understanding of her work.

Haas majored in studio art and minored in music at Smith College in Northampton, Mass. She also holds a master's degree in opera performance. She is a professional musician, a mezzo-soprano and performs regularly in opera, oratorio and recital. In addition to her music interests, she teaches various art classes to adults and children and maintains an art studio in her home. Haas's interest in music and art is similar to the musical training and interests of other artists displaying work in the council chamber. She applies musical references to her artwork. "Even silent subjects have a song," she said. "However, I might ask myself, does this still-life sound like blasting trumpets or a mellow flute? Is this landscape in a minor or major key?"

The current display will be on view through Thursday, September 26. A reception will be held from 7 to 8 p.m. on Monday, August 12, immediately preceding the council meeting. The Municipal Building is located at 25 Crescent Road. The council chambers are accessible from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on weekdays except when reserved. To check on availability, call 301-474-8000 or write to abelton@greenbeltdmd.gov.

Faerie Dances at Schrom Hills Bring Wonder and Delight

by Matt Arbach

Alight Dance Theater brought a tale of wonder to life at Schrom Hills Park on August 4. Segments of a larger dance piece entitled Faerie were performed by five dancers, using the natural environment as their stage. According to artistic director and performer Matina Phillips, the show is meant to reignite the idea that there is magic around us, often most accessible from a child's perspective. "Adults use logic," she said. "Their focus on reality causes that magic to disappear."

This work was premiered in April at Joe's Movement Emporium in Mount Rainier. It was there that they first met 8-year-old dancer Dylan Best, who performed the role of the child in the production. The other dancers were Katie Murphy and Rebecca Weiss, both of whom have a long relationship with Alight, as well as Phillips and Associate Artistic Director Eleni Grove.

Phillips and Grove were the choreographers. Both made a study of the idea of faeries in fantasy literature, who often are depicted as "part of the environment and spirits of nature," said Phillips. Grove noted that the intent was to avoid the "overly sweet stereotype," and instead, added Phillips, "portray faeries as just like humans, with all the range and spectrum of ideas and feelings."

The other major theme of the work was to focus on what makes individuals unique, emphasized Phillips. This was shown in the instances where the four faeries, after dancing in tandem, break free and perform their own movements.

Using a mystical-sounding soundtrack, the performance began with Best inviting the faeries, who were hiding among the trees, to come forth. Using the trees and garden, the troupe performed gentle movements around the audience. Best played the part of both observer and participant. The faeries, dressed in flowing natural-colored costumes, eventually made their way back to the forest, after an embrace of Best.

Best began rehearsing with Alight in February and said her experience was "really fun and exciting, as well as sweaty," commenting on the heat of the day. Grove remarked on her ability to remember all the details.

Afterward, there was a brief workshop where all present were invited to connect with their bodies through various bending, stretching and aerobic exercises. Then all were asked to create their own faerie name, which combined one's favorite color and animal, and come up with a pose that best described the name. The event concluded with everyone given sticks and natural objects to build their own faerie home.

The April performance and residency at Joe's Movement Emporium were funded by a grant from NextLOOK, which is supported by the Clarice Smith Performing Arts Center and the Emporium. The August 4 event as well as a movement series from September 28 to October 6 and an Artful Afternoon on October 6, both of which will be at the Community Center, plus a performance at this year's Labor Day Festival, are funded by a grant from the Greenbelt Community Foundation.

Alight Dance Theater began in 2010, centered in Greenbelt, by Artistic Director Angella Foster. According to their website (alightdancetheater.com), it "strives to generate and strengthen en community through storytelling, interweaving a movement-based art rooted in collaboration that spans cultures and generations to entertain, illuminate and educate."

Phillips and Grove began their leadership roles in the fall of 2016, but had developed choreography together since 2013. Phillips had been a dancer in the company two years prior to taking charge.

Grove remarked that Faerie is a work that evolves with each performance. All the upcoming events will be presented outside, adjusted to the natural environment of each venue. Grove said that while most of the work is set, there are times when the performers are allowed to improvise, thus putting an emphasis on individuality. Phillips hopes the work resonates with the "power of belief" inherent in a child's imagination.

News Review Editor Reveals Secrets of the Weekly Miracle

by Mary Moien

On July 10, Gary Childs, editor of the Greenbelt News Review, provided the Greenbelt Golden Age Club members with the secrets behind The Weekly Miracle: Getting the Greenbelt News Review Together. Childs described the ongoing effort to produce the paper each week; as soon as one paper goes to the printer, staff starts on the next week's issue. He talked about the various types of volunteers who work on the paper, including some who are in the Golden Age Club. Childs emphasized the need for news from all areas of the city and the importance of people and organizations alerting the paper to what is going on in their neighborhoods. Of course, volunteers are always needed to cover meetings and activities for the paper. Childs held up several recent editions to illustrate how the paper is trying to have a front page story and picture every week from Greenbelt West and Greenbelt East.

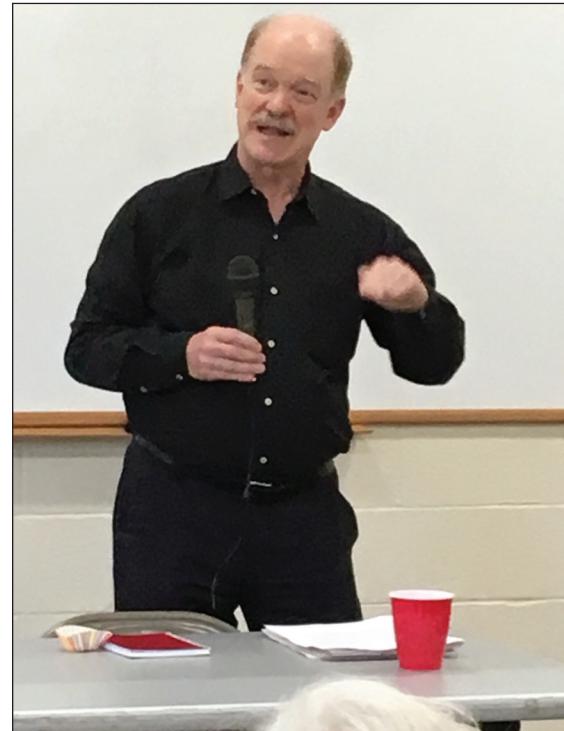

Childs also gave the club a glimpse into his life before he moved to Greenbelt three years ago and more recently, taking over as editor from Mary Lou Williamson, now editor emerita. Childs had a wide-ranging working life, including being a youth worker, a Lutheran minister, a pharmaceutical representative and later having a full career in the foreign service. Here in Greenbelt he enjoys gardening in his spare time.
